Brian Wilhorn

Helping Readers Love Reading

Monday, March 12, 2018 at Thomas Jefferson Middle School,
1402 N. Holden St., Port Washington, WI 53074

5:45-7:15 PM Business Meeting followed by Speaker
(Optional Light Dinner at 5:15)

Description: Once students can read, how can teachers foster a love of reading? In this session, Brian shares numerous strategies to engage and empower student readers. Learn ways to connect with individual students and how to create a culture of reading within classrooms. Hear about reading programs that involve the whole school and how to encourage and support reading at home. Most importantly, numerous children's books are embedded throughout the presentation.

Brian Wilhorn: For over twenty years Brian Wilhorn has had his feet in the classroom, his nose in a book, and his finger on the pulse of children's literature. His love of reading transfers directly to his students – they beg, borrow, and steal (figuratively, of course) for more time to read. Brian is convinced that motivating readers becomes infinitely easier when they are given books worth reading, books they want to read, and created Help Readers Love Reading to share those books with other educators. Brian is currently a reading intervention teacher in central Wisconsin where he lives with his wife, children, and too many piles of books.
