Annotation Guide for Close Reading Nonfiction Texts

Before Reading: 4 P's of Pre Reading	Preview Scan & Skim Scan the pages and notice text features (titles, captions, charts) Scan to find the author and publication date. Skim by reading the headings and	Predict What do you predict this text is about (topic)? Which words seem important? What do you think those words mean? How could this topic connect to the world right now?	Prior Knowledge What do you already know about this topic? What looks familiar or connects to something you know? How does this connect to topics you've discussed in class?	Purpose What was the author's purpose for writing this text? (P.I.E.) What is my purpose for reading today? (Ex: identifying key details, finding evidence, making a claim, determining the main idea)
First Read Annotate The Key Details	the first and last sentence. Names Who or what is the article about? Names of people, groups, locations, events, or ideas. This is a KEY DETAIL! Circle it! HELLO MY NAME IS	Numbers Dates, statistics, dollar amounts, population, or other data. This is a KEY DETAIL! Circle it!	New or Important Information Does the information answer the 5Ws or H questions? This is a KEY DETAIL!! Underline it!	"Gap" Words Notice unfamiliar words. Notice academic vocabulary and words connected to the topic. Ask: Could some students be confused by this word? Put a box around it and then figure out the precise meaning!
Second Read Study Structure and Meaning	Summarize Topics & Issues After reading the text, skim each paragraph and notice: Topics, Issues, Problems, Big Ideas or Motifs Each paragraph can be different! Write these in the margin of the text for each paragraph!	Main Idea Ask: What's the overall topic- who or what is the text mostly about? Ask: What is the author teaching me about this topic? (Look back at key details you marked) Topic + Author's Teaching = Main Idea Write this in one sentence at the end of the text!	Organization How does the author structure and organize the text? How are paragraphs used? How is the information explained? What's the POV? Mark it with an arrow!	Questions and Connections Use question marks to show a spot that is confusing or you have a question. Use exclamation points to mark spots that connect to yourself, another text, or the world.