

Orthographic Mapping In Comprehensive Literacy Classrooms and Interventions

Featuring Jeff Williams

Current reading initiatives focus much attention on the concept of orthographic mapping. This session examines the importance of orthographic mapping within comprehensive literacy classrooms and interventions and de-mystifies the procedures, prompts, and routines to show how and where orthographic mapping can be developed easily without scripted programs.

Jeffery L. Williams is currently the RR Teacher Leader-in-Residence at The Ohio State University and was a classroom teacher and literacy coach for over 30 years in Ohio. He served RRCNA as President and has been on the Board from 2013-present. Jeff has also been on the Board of Directors for NCTE from 2008-2012. Jeff presents at international and national conferences and consults in districts across the country. He has co-authored and contributed to professional books, numerous professional journals, and authored 120 children’s books for Hameray
